6-22-92 We are graduating from Pratt Institute over one-hundred years after it opened its gates, and a mere eight years before the turn of the century. In the past four years Pratt has taken the hundreds of high school art room show-offs from around the world it accepted in September 1988 and shown them they were not alone, but they were in fact unique. These individuals were drawn to Pratt's peculiar Brooklyn campus for whatever reason; location, reputation, atmosphere, or spacious luxury housing, and have since braved everything from the thirty-second killer crit at 9 a.m. to the 72 hour non-stop sleepless night before finals.

Time plays a crucial role in all aspects of Pratt. Prattonia '92 is assembled as a time-capsule. In a decade or two we could come back for a pleasant stroll down urban-renewed Myrtle Avenue, or be startled by a neighborhood that no longer boasts Pratt, but bears the burden of a decrepit physical plant that gave us our ability to survive in the world.

That is why we have encapsulated what might be your secret junk drawer into a priceless hodge-podge of items your future wife or husband would normally throw away mercilessly, while you were at the office late, kerning type for the big account. Some things didn't fit, some things we couldn't find, others just ran away before we could catch them, but most importantly, this is a parcel of time to keep and review at life's crucial moments. These contents are the things we might have forgotten, or glamorized over the years, these are the items we casually carried around everyday. These are the items that nobody will laugh at but you.

ARCHITECTURE

From day one they learn how to brew strong coffee and make ordinary chipboard look like steel. They are the strong souls who brave the windy walk from Main Campus to beloved, decrepit Higgins Hall, final presentation model in hand.

Architecture students have all kept their disgruntled roommates up late through the night, rendering the last few trees on their final drawings. Early in the morning they are often found pleading with their temperamental forty-dollar rapidographs to sputter out one last clean line before it clogs for good. They know late night television schedules by heart, and sometimes mark time by the swanky, late late 1-900 ads.

Through all the sleepless nights and odd hours, the Architecture department produces designers of beautiful, well articulated structures that will alter the skylines of international cities and towns in the future.

As Ayatollah Khomeini called for the death of Salman Rushdie, author of Satanic Verses in 1989, Pratt graduate Robert Mapplethorpe's retrospective exhibit startled Middle America. Controversy over public and Federal support of artists came to the forefront of media discussion and continued to dominate the news for the past four years. Constitutional controversies like these have forced many imaginative artists to contemplate their unalienable right to Freedom of Expression.

ENGINEERING

Possibly the most misunderstood and least-appreciated school on campus, the Engineering department devotes its time to producing a new generation of creative scientists. New fuels, textiles, metals, plastics, pollution control systems and even computers designed by Pratt engineers are bound to advance the thinking process of more than one industrial designer, architect or fashion designer.

Pratt administration voted to close the School of Engineering this past year, but not without an outpouring of supportive efforts to save the unique school by the whole Pratt community. Supporter's efforts were to no avail, as Pratt has already drawn up a master plan for a multi-use "Engineering" building to make a more space efficient and more compact physical plant.

Despite the schools abrupt demise, Engineering students from around the world continue to cram for their fifth exam in one week and devise the ultimate concrete canoe. The school may close its doors, but Pratt's engineers will continue to succeed in the workplace.

ART & DESIGN

Theory, practice and lots of glue hold the schools of Art and Design together. Throughout freshman year we all learned there was more to being an artist than a #2 pencil and modeling clay. From there we became a broad range of artists and designers.

Education majors somehow managed to balance an enormous load while teaching Saturday Art School classes. Painting and Sculpture majors developed new ways of seeing and interpreting their surroundings in countless mediums. Communication Design students tended to make all their designs stick with alot of talk and a little help from rubber cement.

Outside of Main Building, the Photo and Film and Video departments were both exposed to a wide range of media, taking four years to focus and develop their talents. The Fashion department stitched up new trends and contemporary classics for the world and an ever fashion-conscious campus. Together in Pratt Studios, Industrial Design students learned there was more to plastics than Canal Street and plastic welder, while Interior design majors dispelled the myth of the interior decorator as they spent hours drafting and designing the architect's overlooked interiors.

With a wide variety of student interests and ideas, the Art and Design department, thanks to an excellent Art History department, continued to produce artists knowledgeable of their past, aware of the present and geared toward the future.

THE UNWRITTEN RULES FOR AN ENJOYABLE SURVEY:

- ALWAYS
cut your mats last-minute, preferably with a dull blade.
- ALWAYS
hang poor, late or last-minute type assignments as high as possible on the board.
- ALWAYS
boast: "Next time I'm going to tape what they say!"
- NEVER
claim to understand the cryptic, five word summary of your semester's progress in Lorretta's almighty "book."
- NEVER
sleep the night before survey to achieve that lightheaded sensation as you balance on a chair sticking tacks into an unsteady wall.

Welcome to Brooklyn! A great place to visit, a nice place to live.

While you studied hard at Pratt you're sure to have taken advantage of...

THE FINE, CONVENIENT SHOPPING DISTRICT of Myrtle Avenue, where self-preservation skills and a good track record didn't hurt.

THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME to learn an exciting new lingo as you tried to figure out if the gang of young teenagers were planning their party, or your funeral.

LOCAL LATE-NIGHT GOURMET EATERIES while many ventured into SoHo, the Village or the Slope, others could be found enjoying the delicacies of Kum Kau until 1 a.m., running shoes suggested.

THE FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS who probably collected more change outside A&P than most students had to spend on a week's groceries.

(or how to convince an out-of townner that Brooklyn is safe.)*

Dr. Jeffery Lavigne

A New York proctologist known as MD TUSCH, was charged with forty-nine counts of gross negligence, including charges that he damaged and bruised patients during laser surgery for anal warts, fissures and hemorrhoids sufferers. Pratt Art Direction majors' prized example of subway advertizing art becomes a relic of a more naive era of subway consumerism. Oh well, there's still 1(900) I CONFESS.

Jeffery Daumer

A flesh-hungry man is caught in 1991 for dismembering multiple victims' bodies and storing them in his home. No signs of unusual activity were sighted until decomposition was in full progress. On a local note, Pratt is still trying to find out who hurt many of Conrad's kitties...

YES, We do have sports teams!

The ARC's hardwood once again became a court of dreams. Although the Black and Gold struggled early, it came on with a bold rush in the season's second half. Sophomore guard Bobby Fuller led the team in scoring, including a new Pratt record of seven three-pointers in an overtime game against Saint Joseph's. Anne-Bridgette Nilssen became the first woman to play the all-men's basketball team in eighteen years. After serving up a narrow loss versus Yeshiva in the season opener, the Varsity tennis team netted five straight, and continued to reach it's optimistic goals. Women's volleyball (4-8), and men's soccer (0-9), showed heart and always went the distance, but both teams sorely needed bench support in the lategoing. Camilla Heier shined brightly for cross-country, indoor and outdoor track teams by winning the Hudson Valley Championship (3.15 miles in 20:36), and placed fourth in the Colgate Women's Games.

◀ Cannoneer's captain Tim O'Connell looks to score from the stripe.

We would like to thank those who contributed their time and effort to make this time-capsule: That Hipster Joe DiPrima, AKA David Vogler. Neil Hayes and Linda Vega for being available at any time. Sandy Fagbemi for the prompt list of students. Joe Roberts and Ray Barber for access to the Mac. The patience of Linda Thomas, and the use of her gallery. Rob Baskinger and Mike Thomas for getting us into this mess. Herbert Bourem for telling us where we could put our cans. Robert Gordon for understanding the red tape. The one and only May... Rothco who opened things up. The MTA for the survival maps. Jon Simeonson at the Prattler for the use of the Geraldo archive picture files. Rich Udewitz, Sports Info. Director for his for his excellent coverage of sports. Alice E. Harvey for her open ears and Quick computer lessons. Jason for dealing with an overtired girl friend. Jeff Bernstein at Enterprise Press- a gentleman amongst Gentlemen. Luigi's Sicilian corner slice. Special Thanks to Mary Haddad. The Mylanta corporation. Charles Bukowski. The makers of TUMS. The advice and influence of Jay Forman, and Michelle Sager who will always say the right things at the wrong moments. Tuffy, our constant companion. Remember, you can even stand on your head for eight weeks... Ian Cunningham, The King and I. ABC Broadcast Graphics...
